Experiment in Navigation.

A paper published in Saigou, in French Cochia-Caica, gives an account of a singular experiment recently made in that colony with a new means of motive power. A Frenchman resident at the town of He-tien, a small port on the Gulf of Siam, conceived the idea that it would be perfectly practicable to make the immense turtles, which are not uncommon in those parts and which swim with no little rapidity, do service in drawing boats.

He purchased two large turtles at a cost of $20, and fitted them out with a net harness, with reins. Then he obtained a light, open boat, about 15 feet long, and attached his turtles to it by means of traces.

Then, holding his reins fast, he set out on a little voyage with the turtle team. The creatures paddled along very prettily at a rate somewhat exceeding the ordinary walking gait of a man. As they directed their course toward the open sea, and as the weather was calm and beautiful and the voyege exceedingly pleas-ant, it did not occur to the Frenchman to make any very thorough test of his ability to guide the animals.

Much delighted, indeed, with the success of his experiment he kept on and on until he presently noted that he was already a considerable distance out at sea and that the sun was setting.

The interested navigator then attempted to turn his team about, but the turtles resisted any such movement. They had evidently made up their mind to go to sea and they would not be dissuaded from their pur-The driver pulled his reins until be upset his turlies in the water, but as they regained the use of their flippers they set out pgain for the middle of the ses. Night settled down rapidly. Luckily, the inventor of the new means of marine traction had brought with him a pair of care, and as a last resort he took a knife, out his tugs, and let his sea steeds, harness, reins and all, go their way.

Then he rowed back laboriously to his village, lamenting his expenditure on the turiles, and resolving not to try any further experiment in navigation.—Youth's Com-

Snakes her only Friends.

A singular character, says a dispatch from Salem, Va., by name Martha Ann Tillson, and who was known as the "snake woman," died near there recently. She lived in a little cabin at the foot of Twelve O'Clock knob, and led a hermit's life, having no one to share her aboad except snakes. By the few who were ever allowed to see the in-terior of her cabic it is said to have been literally swarming with her strange companions, with which she ate and slept, and which were seen lying in her bosom and coiled about her neck, body and limbs whenever shout her neck, body and make whenever she was caught sight of.

Her extraordinary predelection for these unpleasant creatures is supposed to have arisen from a morbid feeling that she was, like them, hated of men, for, naturally deformed, she received in addition an injury to the spine while an infant, and, though perfectly sound in mind, was of so sensitive a nature as to render her miserable and uneasy in the presence of any but her parents. She was observed to steal away every day with a pan of milk, and, on being followed, was found to be caressing a dozen or so rattlesnakes, while they drank from the vessel she held in her lap. Horrified, her parents tried to reason with her, then to pucish and finally to confine her, in an endeavor to bresk her of her fondness for the reptiles, but she pined so for her pets that they feared she would die if kept from them. She was a little, fair woman of about 45, with sandy hair, very abundant and long, which she wore in a number of tight plaits, which, combined with her deformly and the odd, miscellaneous style of dressing, the result of her refusal to hold any communication with a fellow being, served to make her a most remarkable looking object. She was looked upon as a witch by the negroes about, who declared her to be possessed of the evil eye, and hated and feared her accordingly, though her life was a most harm-less, quiet one. She had been dead some days when discovered, and her dead body was literally covered by a writhing mass of snakes, which had to be killed before it could be removed, for the reptiles turned viciously on all approaching the remains. On her heart was found a huge rattlesnake

Wake Up.

If you wake up in the morning with a bitter or bad taste in your mouth, Languer, Dull Headache, Despondency, Constipation, take Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the bilious stomach, sweetens the breath and cleanses the furred tongue. Children as well as adults sometimes eat something that does not digest well, producing Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Restlessness, or Sleeplessness-a good dose of Regulator will give relief. So perfectly harmless is this remedy that it can be taken by the youngest infant or the most delicate person without injury, no matter what the condition of the system may be. It can do no harm if it does no good, but its reputation for 40 years proves it never fails in doing good.
